Nestled on Bournemouth's seafront, this restaurant offers stunning views but has faced challenges during its recent refurbishment. Diners noted the cozy yet cramped downstairs setting lacked atmosphere. While staff were generally friendly and service attentive, inconsistencies in handling dietary restrictions and reservations raised concerns. The food received praise for its quality and value, particularly the "Club 60" menu, though portion sizes were considered small. Highlights included a delightful afternoon tea with a decent selection, while some options fell flat. Overall, it's a charming spot with potential, but improvements in training and ambiance could enhance the experience.
